CDC Quietly Changes Definition Of 'Vaccine' As COVID-19 Continues To Infect Vaccinated People

The Center for Disease Control has a new definition of "vaccine" on their website as COVID-19 continues to infect the vaccinated.

As Joe Biden gears up to announce his new "strategy" to combat the COVID-19 Delta variant, the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention quietly changed the definition of "vaccine." This comes as vaccinated people continue to get infected with coronavirus, and as vaccine effectiveness is reportedly "waning."

The CDC recently changed the definition of “vaccine” on their website amid a growing outbreak of “breakthrough” vaccinated people; infections that have prompted many businesses and governmental bodies to reinstitute mask mandates, social distancing, and other COVID-19 pandemic restrictions.

On August 26, 2021, the definition of “vaccine” on the CDC website was “a product that stimulates a person’s immune system to produce immunity to a specific disease.” The definition of “vaccination” at that time was “the act of introducing a vaccine into the body to produce immunity to a specific disease.”

As of yesterday, the new definition of “vaccine” on the CDC website is “a preparation that is used to stimulate the body’s immune response against diseases.” The definition of “vaccination” describes “the act of introducing a vaccine into the body to produce protection from a specific disease.”

Joe Biden is set to present his six-pronged “strategy” to combat the spread of the Delta variant and increase U.S. COVID-19 vaccination rates on Thursday.

The CDC “vaccine” and “vaccination” definition changes come as vaccinated people continue to be infected and spread coronavirus. As was previously reported by National File, a new study has revealed that people who are “fully vaccinated” carry a staggering 251 times the normal viral load of COVID-19. Experts are concerned that this may pose a risk to those who have not received the COVID-19 vaccine, and it also seems likely these increased viral loads could result in more so-called “breakthrough” cases of those who have been vaccinated contracting COVID-19.

A study by the Oxford University Clinical Research Group published on August 10th in The Lancet found that fully vaccinated people carry 251 times the viral load of coronavirus as compared to those who have not received one of the controversial vaccines. “Viral loads of breakthrough Delta variant infection cases were 251 times higher than those of cases infected with old strains detected between March-April 2020,” reads the study. The vaccines seem to allow vaccinated individuals to carry unusually high viral loads without becoming sick, transforming them into super spreaders who experience symptoms later on, as reported by Daily Veracity...” (READ MORE: Jen Psaki Calls Coronavirus The 'Global Plandemic')

The definition change also comes a few weeks after the FDA seemingly approved the Pfizer vaccine just days after CDC Rochelle Walensky admitted that the effectiveness of the COVID-19 vaccines are “waning,” confirming earlier reports by National File. “We are seeing concerning evidence of waning vaccine effectiveness over time and against the Delta variant,” Rochelle Walensky said during a White House Press Briefing. “Reports from our international colleagues, including Israel, suggest increased risk of severe disease amongst those vaccinated early.” (READ MORE: NIH Began Study on Vaccine Safety For Pregnant Women AFTER Many Moms Had Taken The Jab)
