“If ever there was a reason when the precautionary principle should be applied, then the safety of our children should be it.”

The Senator went on to note that “over 50,000 children have caught Covid in Australia and not one has died directly from the disease.”

“This evidence is supported by the fact that children have fewer angiotensin-converting enzyme 2 (ACE2) receptors, to which the SARS-CoV-2 attaches, and as a result are at the lowest risk of a severe outcome from COVID-19,” he said.

“I note that in Moderna’s country of manufacture, the USA, the FDA has not approved the vaccine for 12-17-year-olds. Sweden and Denmark have also banned the use of the Moderna vaccine for young people due to safety concerns.”

“For the last 18 months Premiers have used the precautionary principle to destroy our country by shutting borders, imposing lockdowns and keeping our children out of schools,” the Senator added in his Facebook post.

“If the precautionary principle can be used for COVID then why can’t it be applied in regards to vaccines, especially when it comes to our children,” he said.
