

yahoo!news

Sign in

Mail

News

US

Politics

World

COVID-19

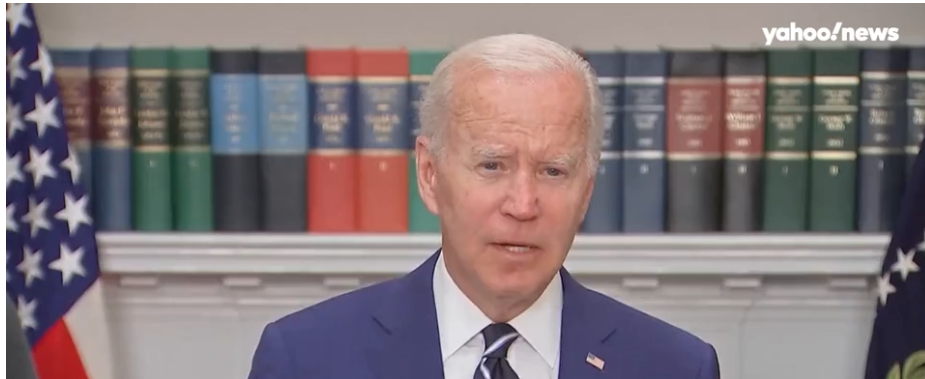

Climate Change

Health

Science

Originals

Contact Us

yahoo!news

TRENDING

Senate OKs landmark gun violence bill, House passage is next

Associated Press · 6 min read

'Who did the body?' Brad Pitt's GQ magazine cover is 'very upsetting' to some people

LA Times · 5 min read

Angry Trump Again Demands The Impossible From Jan. 6 Panel After Riveting Hearing

HuffPost · 2 min read

Top GOP pollster says Trump is 'paying a price' — even among Republicans — for what the...

INSIDER · 2 min read

A farm feeding chickens with marijuana instead of antibiotics is fetching higher prices from...

INSIDER · 3 min read

POPULAR

Biden says another pandemic will come and the US needs to start preparing for it

Business Insider

Children under 5 are now eligible for the COVID-19 vaccine. Here's what parents should know.

yahoo!news

'The emergency phase of COVID-19 is over': Doctors' group urges Biden administration to revise guidelines for children

Alexander Nazaryan

· Senior White House Correspondent

Wed, June 22, 2022, 5:03 AM · 5 min read

COVID-19 UPDATES

View latest news

WASHINGTON — A group of prominent doctors and educators has asked the Biden administration to lift pandemic-related measures that could be causing children to miss school and other activities.

sent by Urgency of Normal — a group that has argued for a steady return to pre-pandemic behaviors — to Dr. Ashish Jha, director of the White House pandemic response team, and Rochelle Walensky, head of the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention.

“The CDC’s COVID-19 school guidelines continue to cause significant disruption to children’s education and to working parents, while providing no demonstrable public health benefit in limiting COVID-19 spread. These policies have serious unintended consequences,” the Urgency of Normal letter argues.

Students arrive at Budlong Elementary School in Chicago in January. (Jose M. Osorio/Chicago Tribune/Tribune News Service via Getty Images)

The group is led by doctors including Lucy McBride, a Washington, D.C., physician, and Vinay Prasad, an oncologist at the University of California, San Francisco. Its efforts have been criticized by some progressives, but Urgency of Normal leaders have strenuously argued that they have no political agenda.

“We are calling for an end to vaccine and testing policies that exclude children from regular life,” McBride told Yahoo News in a text message. “Our goal is to help restore confidence in the human immune system, our amazing COVID vaccines, and in public health.”

Tuesday’s letter asks the CDC to do away with mass testing of children at venues like schools and camps in favor of a test-to-treat approach that seeks to identify children who

Trump's White House Covid response coordinator details turbulent start to pandemic

NBC

U.S. CDC advisers back Moderna COVID vaccine for teens, older children

Reuters

Urgency of Normal also argues that the CDC should do away with its vaccination recommendation in the hope

Story continues

READ MORE

It's not summer yet, but climate change is already showing its teeth in 2022

Yahoo News · 5 min read

Three weeks after Uvalde school massacre, many Texans fight to keep focus on changing gun laws

Yahoo News · 10 min read

As the coronavirus evolves, scientists seek a new generation of vaccines

Yahoo News · 8 min read

