

Central Bank Digital Currency initiatives permeate agenda for World Economic Forum's upcoming 'Summer Davos' in China

Davos Man wants you beholden to a global Social Credit Score system.

JORDAN SCHACHTEL
MAY 25, 2023

The World Economic Forum has released a list of co-chairs for their upcoming China conference next month, and unsurprisingly, it appears that a ruthlessly totalitarian agenda, especially on the monetary front, is in the works for the June confab.

The Dossier is a reader-supported publication.
To receive new posts and support my work,
consider becoming a free or paid subscriber.

The China-based, CCP-sponsored gathering, the Annual Meeting of the New Champions, is commonly referred to as “Summer Davos,” and it has been occurring for over a decade, but was paused during the covid hysteria era.

To catch up to speed on Summer Davos as a whole, read The Dossier’s latest piece on the WEF-CCP alliance:

World Economic Forum announces 'Summer Davos' is coming to China

JORDAN SCHACHTEL · APR 6

Read full story →

For the World Economic Forum and Beijing, Summer Davos is purposed with facilitating partnerships between multinational corporations and the Chinese Communist Party (CCP). Once a minuscule operation that didn't garner much press or corporate attention, Summer Davos has become a must-attend for Fortune 500 businesses seeking to sell their corporate souls to the CCP.

This year's conference is advertised as an event focusing on the global economy.

The WEF's recently published intro to the upcoming Summer Davos meeting reads:

“The global economy is at a pivotal moment of transformation. Established business and industry models have not only been challenged by the COVID-19 pandemic but are now being tested by a more competitive geopolitical and geoeconomic environment.”

If you dig a little deeper into this “moment of transformation,” you'll find that there is a very specific action item for Summer Davos this year, and it all points to the centralization of power and more government control over the people, through the further weaponization of money as a tool for control.

The co-chairs roster for Summer Davos includes some very powerful individual forces and mouthpieces for ruling class power centers, and it offers some insight into what will dominate the agenda when the conference begins next month.

Co-Chairs

Annual Meeting of the New Champions brings together the world's top academics, politicians, business, youth, and civil society leaders to engage in addressing the most pressing issues on the global agenda

Ngozi Okonjo-Iweala
Director General, World Trade Organization

Nonkululeko Nyembezi
Chairman, The Standard Bank Group Limited

Benedikt Sobotka
Chief Executive Officer, Eurasian Resources Group

Robin Zeng
Founder, Chairman and CEO, Contemporary Amperex Technology Co., Limited (CATL)

Xin Baoan
Executive Chairman, State Grid Corporation of China

Eric Jing
Chairman and Chief Executive Officer, Ant Group

Meirav Oren
Chief Executive Officer and Co-Founder, Versatile

Carrie Chan Kai Yi
Chief Executive Officer and Co-Founder, Avant Meats

Jeremy Allaire
Co-Founder, Chairman and Chief Executive Officer, Circle Internet Financial

Ngozi Okonjo-Iweala, the leader of the WTO, is a longtime stooge for Bill Gates and the greater Davos agenda. Her current outfit has continually pushed the idea of a transnational Central Bank Digital Currency (CBDC).

Another interesting addition is Jeremy Allaire, who runs the BlackRock-backed Circle. His company manages the USDC digital “stablecoin,” a centralized asset that is continually being pitched to the world as the ideal platform for a government-controlled CBDC.

Eric Jing is the leader of the Ant Group, which owns Alipay, the world’s largest digital payments platform. Alipay recently became the first company to integrate China’s digital yuan CBDC into its payments platform.

Nonkululeko Nyembezi is the chairman of South Africa's Standard Bank, which has expressed “strong support” for CBDCs.

Given the co-chair lineup, it appears that the WEF and CCP want CBDCs to be at the top of the agenda for this year's conference. The two other major industries supported by the WEF's Summer Davos co-chairs: natural resources and food.

The Dossier will continue to cover the WEF-China collaborative effort in the coming days and weeks.

Type your email...	Subscribe
--------------------	-----------

107 Likes · 13 Restacks

43 Comments