O'Keefe Media Group on Monday released undercover video of a Google Growth Strategist exposing Google's search engine manipulation for Kamala Harris's campaign.

Dakota Leazer revealed that Google has been actively coordinating with the Kamala Harris campaign, manipulating its search engine advertisements to favor her in the 2024 election.

As previously reported, the Harris Campaign edited news headlines with Google search ads to make it appear major news outlets such as Reuters, CBS News, CNN, NPR and AP are on her side.

While these major news outlets are shilling for Harris, her campaign edited the news headlines without the outlets' consent or knowledge.

The ads say "sponsored" but the outlets did not publish the text. The favorable headlines were written by the Harris campaign.

"Google says a 'glitch' occurred which allowed the Harris campaign to run paid ads with fake headlines to deceive voters." the outlet reported.

The Trump campaign didn't run these types of Google ads. Only Kamala Harris did.

Per O'Keefe Media Group:

"Google was essentially promoting through its ads rhetoric that was very pro-Kamala," admits Dakota Leazer, a Growth Strategist at Google, during an undercover date with an OMG American Swiper journalist. Leazer reveals that Google has been actively coordinating with the Kamala Harris campaign, manipulating its search engine advertisements to favor her in the 2024 election. He explains, "It seemed to link out to legitimate news publication sites. So, it seemed like it was an ad from PBS, but it was really an ad for the Kamala campaign," making users believe they were reading unbiased reports from reputable sources.

Leazer also confesses that Google's primary objective is to generate ad revenue through fear-based content, explaining, "I think whatever demographic is most fearful is going to be most profitable." According to Leazer, the left currently represents the most fearful demographic, which is why Google has been pushing pro-Kamala narratives for profit, explaining "I think right now the left is more fearful than the right is."

He further states, "It's all about the share of the stock price," revealing that Google's liberal bias is not just political, but tied to financial gain. He adds, "I think Google has a belief that one side will allow them to make more money," revealing Google's profit motives through driving political manipulation.

Leazer's admission mirrors past media motives, including CNN Technical Director Charlie Chester's claim that "fear sells," reinforcing the role of big tech and media in shaping public perception through fear and bias.
